Dear Graham:

STAT
Thanks for your recent letter. As you probably know, Jack [redacted] got together last week to discuss the initiatives that we had talked about a few months ago and which you mentioned in your letter.

I am very enthusiastic about moving ahead as they seem to be doing on organizing a special course for Intelligence Analysts, for getting something going that is akin to the Council on Foreign Relations, and for developing some case studies that you and we could use.

I hope we can also move along the two other areas of cooperation we discussed. On the question of increasing participation of Agency people in your programs, I support it and have talked about it to people here. It may be useful to have Bob Murray come down and talk to our Training Selection Board as a way of doing some marketing. I have found a lot of enthusiasm for the proposal of sending a senior Agency officer to the Kennedy School next year as an Intelligence Officer in residence. What we had in mind would be somebody who would be a resource for the School and would participate fully in its activities and might teach a course on the intelligence process. We are now doing something similar at Georgetown.

I would be interested in how your conference on the Soviet Union went last month and if you have anything to pass along, please do. In the meantime, hope to see you soon.

Regards
